The Hidden Dangers would Shock You

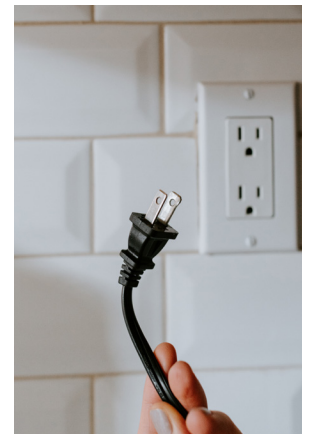

May is National Electrical Safety Month. Here's a friendly reminder on preventing electrical hazards.

For power lines, ALWAYS:

- stay 10 feet from overhead lines 800600305
- refrain from touching anything that is in contact with overhead lines
- assume power lines are live and dangerous
- stay 35 feet away from downed power lines

At home, NEVER:

- plug extension cords into one another
- nail or staple cords to walls or baseboards
- use indoor cords outdoor, and vice versa
- use frayed, loose, or otherwise damaged cords
- overload extension cords

More than half of electrical fires are preventable. Check for the UL certification mark on your appliances and cords to make sure they're safe. 800782489

If you are working on an appliance, even as trivial as a lamp, make sure to unplug before switching bulbs or swapping shades. For bigger projects, always remember to turn the circuit breaker off for the area you will be in.
